PRIVACY INFORMATION FOR STAFF

1. Introduction
NSW Health is committed to safeguarding the privacy of patient and employee information and has implemented measures to comply with these legal obligations. Staff are required to comply with the:
- Health Records and Information Privacy (HRIP) Act 2002 to protect the privacy of health information in NSW, (reference: NSW Health Privacy Manual), and
- Privacy and Personal Information Protection (PPIP) Act 1998 which covers all other personal information, such as employee records, (reference: NSW Health Privacy Management Plan).

This leaflet is a summary of the requirement of these Acts and policies, with a focus on the protection of health information. References to relevant policy documents are provided for further guidance where required. Staff may only access patient/employee personal or health information where this is required in the course of their employment.

2. Summary of the legislation
This brochure is to assist staff understand and comply with the legislative obligations under the HRIP Act. In summary:
- There are 15 Health Privacy Principles and staff must comply with all principles.
- The key principles are described in this brochure.
- Specialised services may have additional or different patient expectations or needs to address regarding information sharing, for example, cancer services, palliative care and mental health services.

3. What is health information?
Health information is personal and clinical information relating to an individual. Typically this is all the information contained in a patient’s health record. Health information includes the patient’s personal details such as name, address, contact details, date of birth and so on, as well as all of their clinical information including:
- A patient’s physical or mental health or a disability
- A patient’s express wishes about the provision of health services to him or her
- Information relating to the donation of human tissue
- Genetic information that may be predictive of the health of the patient, relatives or descendants

If health information is stripped of information which can identify an individual, or from which a person’s identity can reasonably be ascertained, then it is considered to be ‘de-identified’ information. Privacy laws do not apply to de-identified information. Further guidance: Privacy Manual, Section 5 (Key Concepts)

4. Privacy Complaints
If you receive a privacy complaint you must advise your Manager, the Patient Liaison Officer or the Medical Record or Clinical Information Manager of your facility. The Privacy Contact Officer for your health service must also be notified as soon as possible. It is important to deal with all complaints promptly. Further guidance: Privacy Internal Review Guidelines

5. Use and Disclosure

Health information may be used or disclosed by authorised staff for the primary purpose of providing treatment and ongoing care. In addition, it may be used or disclosed for purposes such as health service management, training or research activities; for investigation and law enforcement; in the event of serious and imminent threats to individuals and the public; and in ways that would be reasonably expected for the delivery of patient care.

It is not necessary to obtain patient consent to disclose relevant health information to other clinicians involved in treatment of the patient. Staff have an obligation to ensure the patient understands that this disclosure will occur to enable continuous ongoing care. This may include, for example, the transfer of information within the health service, to a GP, to another hospital, health service or health professional involved in the patient’s care. Advice on how to communicate this information to patients is provided in Section 7 of this leaflet.

Personal health information may also be used or disclosed for the other related purposes, for example:

- For purposes related to the operation of the NSW Health service, for example, to conduct safety and quality improvement initiatives.
- For purposes related to the operation of the NSW Health service, for example, to conduct safety and quality improvement initiatives.
- To contact patients regarding patient/client satisfaction surveys that assist to evaluate and improve services.
- To other health services and authorised parties to help prevent a serious and imminent threat to someone’s life, health or welfare, or in an emergency.
- To share information about the safety, welfare or wellbeing of children and young people in accordance with the Children and Young Persons (Care and Protection) Act 1998.
- To investigate and report a complaint. This includes but is not restricted to complaints about patient care, staff conduct, adverse incidents, patient safety, the health service.
- To comply with a subpoena, summons or search warrant.
- To manage a legal action or claim brought by the patient against the health service.

Further guidance: Privacy Manual, Section 11 (Using and disclosing personal health information)
- Accredited hospital chaplains may use relevant patient information to provide spiritual and pastoral care to patients with a nominated religion. Should patients wish for their religion to be withheld from the chaplaincy service they must advise clinical staff or patient administrative staff.

6. Consent

Staff must always obtain consent when it is required, for example, when used for media or fundraising purposes, or for disclosure to a third party who is not involved in the patient’s care. If you are not sure when consent is required check with your Manager or contact your Medical Record or Clinical Information Department or your local Privacy Contact Officer. Consent for disclosure of personal health information can be provided either in writing and placed on the patient’s file, or verbally. If provided verbally, this must be clearly documented in the patient file.

Further guidance: Privacy Manual, Sections 5.4 (Consent) and 11.2.2 (Consent)
PRIVACY INFORMATION FOR STAFF

7. Collection of health information
Health information must be collected directly from the patient unless unreasonable or impracticable to do so. The information collected must be relevant, up to date and accurate. Reasonable steps must be taken to inform the patient about how the information may be used, who may access it and to whom it will be disclosed.

It is important to inform patients who are being treated by a number of multi-disciplinary teams that their health information may be shared between different specialities or clinical services. Particular care should be taken if information is to be shared between agencies as patient consent may be required.

The Privacy Leaflet for Patients must be made available to all patients. It explains when and how patient information may be used and disclosed. This leaflet is also relevant to staff who are being treated as patients within the health service.
Further guidance: Privacy Manual, Section 7 (Collecting personal health information) and Appendix 5 (Privacy Leaflet for Patients)

8. Security
Health information must be stored securely and disposed of appropriately at all times (secure bins or shredding). It should never be put into unlocked bins. It should be protected from unauthorised access, use or disclosure. Medical records and computer screens should not be accessible to unauthorised people.

Unauthorised access includes accessing the electronic medical record (eMR) if you are not involved in the client’s/patient’s current or ongoing care, or if you are not otherwise authorised to do so.

If you make or receive a telephone call about a patient, it is essential that you do not breach their privacy.
Further guidance: Privacy Manual, Section 9 (Retention, Security and Protection)

9. Access, Amendment and Accuracy
Patients or their authorised representative can apply for access to their medical records (including images). Applications for access or copies of records should be in writing. Some departments may have a procedure in place where sensitive or complex reports or records are accessed with a doctor in the first instance. Staff should check whether this is necessary before granting access.

Staff should make every effort to ensure patient information is accurate. Patients are entitled to request amendment (not deletion) of their health information to ensure it is accurate, up to date and not misleading. If the health service is not willing to make the requested changes, it must take such steps as are reasonable to attach additional information to the record. The patient’s own comments should be attached as an addendum to the record on request, along with an explanation of the circumstances.

In addition to ensuring correct clinical information, patient information such as name, address, contact person and current GP name must be correct for each encounter.
Further guidance: Privacy Manual, Sections 10 (Accuracy) and 12 (Access and Amendment)
PRIVACY INFORMATION FOR STAFF

10. Important Points:

- All personal information and health information is confidential.
- Health facilities have an audit capacity in the electronic Medical Record (eMR) and other systems to investigate staff access to patient records. Staff must only access patient records where this is required for direct patient care or is required in the course of their employment.
- Staff should ensure patient privacy is not breached if discussing patient cases in public areas, for example, cafeterias, lifts and corridors.
- Printers and faxes should be located in secure staff areas. Patient information should not accumulate around these.
- Staff should not disclose patient information without delegated authority, authorisation from a manager or without patient consent.
- Fees and charges may be raised for provision of copies of medical records.
- Database managers and custodians must ensure compliance with all privacy principles and undertake privacy training.
- Privacy training is available for NSW Health staff. Contact your local privacy officer for details (see below).
- Records containing information pertaining to Aboriginal Health, Adoption, Organ/Tissue Donor, Child Protection, Sexual Assault, Genetic Information, Drug & Alcohol and sexual health may have additional restrictions on use and disclosure.

Further guidance: Privacy Manual Section 15.9 (Information specific laws and policies)
- Police requests for patient details must be handled with care. Refer to local procedures.
